

Immigration And Citizenship

Nearly everyone favors immigration, but there are a few who are of opinion in Canada on numbers and methods. Under Citizenship Minister Walter Harris' guidance, the nation has had a clear but flexible policy on this controversial subject.

In essence, the policy is to admit to Canada "in numbers not exceeding the absorptive capacity of our country and without altering the fundamental character of our people such persons as are likely to contribute to our national life." The policy has brought nearly 800,000 persons to Canada in the years since the end of the second world war—roughly the equivalent of three cities the size of the national capital.

The policy has been to steer a careful course between the two extremes of an excessive inflow of people on the one hand, and a needlessly restrictive immigration law on the other.

Apart from providing the nation with the additional population which it needs to develop its resources, the policy is also aimed at keeping the rate of inflow at a level that will cause a minimum of disturbance to the unemployment picture. Nothing would prejudice the case for immigration more than to have it create or aggravate unemployment.

Two key tenets of the program are that the best time for immigrants to arrive is in the spring, summer and early fall when more jobs are available, and that the admission of an immigrant should be eased and speeded if he has his family around him.

This policy saw its full flowering in 1952, when the immigration department brought in a majority of 40,000-year immigrants in the first six months. In the latter half of the year, the emphasis was on bringing their dependents. In this way, the heaviest inflow came in the months when seasonal unemployment occurs in basic industries. Shipping space in these months went to wives and children.

Canada has been getting an exceedingly fine type of immigrant under the program. The vast majority of these prospective citizens have been coming from countries whose people in the past have demonstrated that they integrate well with the Canadian community and rapidly accept their responsibilities.

Another healthy factor is that almost one out of every four new arrivals last year was a child under 14 years of age, a citizen with several formative years ahead of him in his new community.

Even Canada's southern neighbors have been showing an interest in settling here. Last year, arrivals from the United States were up 20 per cent, and there was a 30 per cent increase in the number of returning Canadians.

Canada has much to contribute to the peace of the world. That contribution will be greater as we grow more numbers, not only because of the increase but by the addition to our population of others who will acquire Canadian ways and add something to our national life.

VOTERS IN DOUBT

There are some thoughtful citizens who ask indifferently, "What should I vote? What difference will my vote make?" But there are other intelligent, conscientious citizens who may feel tempted not to vote for a very different reason.

We refer to those independent voters, weighing carefully the rival claims of the several parties and their candidates, do not find themselves wholly convinced by the parties. Even though they may incline slightly to one side, they may see so much of which they disapprove in that side, and so much support on the other that the feel a desperate uncertainty about the wisdom of their choice. Under such circumstances they may ask whether it is wise to cast a vote which later reflection may convince them was wrong.

This is a respectable dilemma which many above the average voters find themselves in today. Yet they know that in their own personal life, difficult but unavoidable decisions must sometimes be made despite an imperfect understanding of all the factors involved. The only possible choice is to think harder and pray more humbly, then act in the light of their highest sense of what is right, even if that lights seem dim and uncertain at the moment.

A nation cannot help but be blessed by such honest, intelligent, disinterested thinking on the part of its citizens so long as it does not lead to inaction. The liberal who sees all sides of the question but is unable to choose, is the greater of the two evils or the greater of the lesser of all evils as it can be a curse to his country—A democracy discovered through the years it led to Hitlerism. A commitment may be made at the last moment in the voting booth, but it must be made if democracy is to survive. The realization of that very fact can help to bring light to the citizen in doubt.

GARDENING THIS YEAR

Get it's most out of your vegetable garden by starting the garden right, advises P. D. McCalla, Supervisor of Horticulture, Alberta Department of Agriculture. It's not enough these days to ask for bean, carrot, lettuce or colog seed—it's the variety that counts. And you don't have to wait. Invest money in garden space—tilling for yourself. This work is being done for you, and the information collected and summarized by the Alberta Horticultural Advisory Committee.

The Alberta Horticultural Guide is the result—a booklet that should be in every gardener's library. It provides information for you, the grower. If you have a copy, this is a good time to use it, Mr. McCalla says. If you haven't a copy, ask your district agriculturalist for one. It's not only that some varieties suit certain areas better than others, but you will certainly want to know some things about the varieties best suited for storage and perhaps for freezing too.

The same thing holds when you visit your nurseryman for bedding plants. He knows the best variety for your area and is likely to have the best, but it doesn't hurt to have the Horticultural Guide with you. It's made to carry around on its very conveniently into pockets or purses. For best results this spring know it's varieties you want and see that you get them.

Stem Rust—Will It Come in 1953?
All the evidence available at the time indicates that stem rust, and more particularly Race 15 B of wheat stem rust, is not likely to offer a serious threat to Western Canadian grain crops in 1953.

Less Rust in the South: So far this spring, weather conditions throughout the winter-wheat belt of the United States, especially in the Lower Mississippi Valley, have been extremely unfavorable for rust development. Latest official reports indicate the presence of only a very light trace of rust in Texas, where stem rust survives the winter months. Furthermore, owing to prolonged drought conditions, wheat crops in Texas and Oklahoma are patchy, light and developing rapidly. These conditions, by preventing any serious "build-up" of rust in the South this Spring, will greatly reduce the chances of many rust spores being blown northward into Manitoba, and therefore of heavy rust damage occurring in the Prairie Provinces. Predictions are, of course, always risky, but the information available certainly suggests that there will be low damage from Race 15 B of stem rust in Western Canada this year than in 1952.

Some Precautions. Until a variety of wheat that is resistant to Race 15 B of stem rust becomes commercially available, probably in 1954, western farmers should make use of every farm practice that will help wheat crops to mature early and escape possible rust damage. The practical control measures are: (1) Plant wheat as early as possible. (2) Plant only cleaned and treated seed of a recommended variety. (3) Where soil and moisture conditions permit use a phosphate fertilizer. (4) Treat wheat at the proper time with 2,4-D. (5) Grain crops in Western Canada are generally likely to be seriously damaged by Race 15 B of stem rust in 1953. However, let's make any progress the rust invader might attempt to make this year even more difficult by getting our wheat crops in as early as possible.

WEDDINGS

MERKEL-HATTON

In the flower hatched Sanctuary of St. Victor's Catholic Church, May 2nd, one of the most colorful weddings ever witnessed in Gleichen was solemnized when Constance Mae Hatton, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hatton of Gleichen, and Mr. Arthur Michael Merkel, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Merkel of Rockyford, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

As the Bride entered the church she was preceded by the Children of Mary, who were dressed in long white dresses and blue capes. The bride was the first member of the Children of Mary to be married from Gleichen. She was accompanied to the Sanctuary by her father, where a beautiful wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Volini, resident pastor.

The bride wore a long white wedding gown of broad satin with long train, veil, carried a bouquet of roses. Her attendants were, Miss Marjorie Merkel, eldest of groom, who wore a long gown of peach sheer, and Miss Louise Cretin of Cluny, who was dressed in a gown of blue sheer and lace. Merkel, mother of the groom, were escorted by their daughters, who carried white accessories and bouquets of pink and red roses.

The entire ceremony was photographed by J. D. Oatton and J. Brooks with a movie camera. The wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was beautifully decorated with white and pink streamers and white wedding gifts on the table. Places were set for forty eight.

THE PURCHASING POWER OF A BUSHEL OF WHEAT

IN 1930 ONE BUS. OF WHEAT PURCHASED
6 1/2 K.W.Hrs. OF ELECTRIC SERVICE.

IN 1952 ONE BUSHEL OF WHEAT PURCHASED
50 K.W.Hrs. OF ELECTRIC SERVICE

Regardless what the business or profession of a person in Alberta may be, all are vitally concerned with the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat. While we do not wish to belittle our natural resources, the economy of Alberta is dependent upon agriculture. This is something we should never forget. We, therefore, thought it might be of interest to our customers to use a comparative table of the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat today, as compared with 1930, when used to purchase electric service by Farm and Domestic customers. Here is the comparison:

YEAR	Average Elevator Price Per Bushel Received by Alberta	Average Amount Paid Per Kilowatt Hour	Number of Kilowatt Hours Would Purchase
1930	$0.52	8c	6 1/2 K.W.Hrs.
1952	$1.51	30	50 K.W.Hrs.

In other words a bushel of wheat in 1952 would purchase almost eight times the amount of electricity a bushel of wheat would have purchased in 1930 for Farm and Domestic customers on Calgary Power system.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY —

Murder Will Out

By G. PATRICIA WARBURTON

TONIGHT Cora would be killed. Every detail was carefully planned. Now the stage was set. There would be no mistakes. Cora would pay with her life for his years of suffering.

All that Cora had, all that Cora spent was rightfully his. The unfair will his stupid stepfather had made had left him little better than a pauper. Why should Cora have such wealth? Stupid Cora who did not even know how to enjoy money, but founded a Cat and Dog Home?

Even with all her money she had not managed to get a husband. No wonder, with her coy mannerisms, her giggling voice.

He had been clever. Never once, by word or deed, had he revealed his feelings. It was always "Good morning, Cora, how are you today?" when he met her. And after church he would greet her, "A lovely day, Cora, nice to see you."

Oh, he had been careful. He took her to dinner three or four times a year, and she always invited him for Christmas dinner at the big house on the hill.

No one would ever suspect him. He smirked at himself in the mirror and bowed sardonically to his image. He looked impatiently at his watch.

Another five minutes and she would be here. He glanced round the room, taking in every detail. Everything was in place, everything fine. Cora would be surprised.

The lights were dim, the radio played softly, and the large easy chair was in front of the glowing fireplace.

He felt a surge of excitement. He lit a cigarette and wished savagely that she would come.

Then he heard her heels tapping along the hall. She always persisted in wearing high shoes with ridiculously high heels and looked as though she was about to topple over.

The shrill ring of the bell shattered the silence, and he flung the door open.

"Why, Cora, how nice you look," he murmured.

"Do you really like it?" she simpered.

"Marvellous," he replied quickly, wondering whether she meant the monstrosity of her hat or the mustard-coloured coat that did not enhance her pale white complexion and faded blonde hair.

How startled she would be if I told her the truth, he thought. He toyed with the idea while she removed her coat and hat and fluffed her hair, talking incessantly.

She was taken aback by the appearance of the room.

"What have you done to it?" she quavered. "It looks different."

"It's a long time since you paid me a visit, so I changed everything round."

She said nothing, and still seemed puzzled.

I mustn't let her suspect anything, he thought, and turned on all the lights. "There, that's better, isn't it?"

Putting on the lights seemed to reassure her for after a few minutes she was prattling on at a great rate. "Will you have a cocktail, Cora?"

"Well, I suppose I shouldn't, but just one. I'll pretend it's a celebration."

Many a true word spoken in jest, he thought. If you only knew it, you're the celebration, or soon will be.

The cocktail was strong and Cora seldom drank, so her face became flushed, her eyes bright, and she didn't even notice when he turned out the lights and only the fire lit the room.

This was it. This was the zero hour.

He sat on the arm of her chair, close beside her.

She stiffened, but he went on talking and smoking, and gradually she relaxed.

Casualty, he slipped his arm round her.

"You know, Cora, I'm very fond of you. Have been for years, and I often think of you." He put pathos into the last line, then got up quickly as though overcome with emotion.

He came back behind her chair and lightly stroked her hair.

She seemed dazed at first, then as his hand caressed her neck, her breath came quickly, and he thought of the unspinstere ideas that must be running wild in her mind.

For just a second his hands tightened round her neck, and he thought, not that way.

"Poor Cora," he murmured, for she could not see the sharp, glittering blade.

He raised his hand, then brought it down quickly.

She sighed slowly, then toppled over.

He looked fascinated at the red stain on his hand, then shuddered. He looked up apprehensively.

"All right," boomed a voice, "Time out for lunch. Everybody back on the set in an hour."

Exchange Of Farmers Again Been Approved

REGINA.—The exchange of farm workers between Ontario and Saskatchewan has again been approved by the Federal-Provincial Farm Labour Committee.

The Committee Secretary, L. J. Hutchison, Director, Farm Labour Division, Agricultural Representative Service, Regina, said the group had recommended the movement of 200 men from Saskatchewan to assist in haying and harvesting in Ontario. After completion of that work the Committee has requested that if required up to 1,500 eastern harvesters be brought to Saskatchewan for the harvest in this province.

Mr. Hutchison stated that 1,074 Ontario workers came to Saskatchewan last year under the excursion plan and from 2,000 to 4,000 others came on their own. The Committee Secretary emphasized that the number recommended may be revised on the basis of the extent and condition of the 1953 harvest.

The Farm Labour Committee has also considered the problem of domestic help on Saskatchewan farms and has suggested that the federal labour department explore the possibility of bringing domestic immigrants from the British Isles.

A further contingent of immigrant German farm labourers is expected to arrive at the east coast soon. Those who landed at St. John on April 20 are now being directed to farms through the National Employment Service. Of these, 20 are being allocated to Saskatchewan.

Eggs Were Omen Of Things To Come

Body Of Mammoth Discovered

EDMONTON.—A former gold miner told of finding in Alaska of a mammoth's body just as it was 50,000 years ago with flesh and hide intact.

Frank Kelly, now a gas station operator at Fort Nelson, B.C., said in an interview he was on an open-pit mining crew which uncovered the body along with those of a mammoth calf and a tiny horse in the Chatiniki river country near Fairbanks.

"The animal appeared just like it was in real life," said Kelly who is in Edmonton on a visit.

He brought here an 11-pound tooth from the mammoth, somewhat similar in appearance but twice the size of a present-day elephant. The tooth was nine inches long with a seven-inch grinding surface.

Winnipeg To Re-Open Schools In August

WINNIPEG.—It probably will rank as sabotage in the eyes of the school kids, but the Winnipeg School Board has decided to re-open city schools in August instead of the usual September.

The date is Aug. 31, but it's still August.

A board official explained that Aug. 31 falls on a Monday, and if schools were re-opened Sept. 1 the school year would include only 199 days—one day short of the minimum 200 days necessary to collect Provincial grants.

Australia's population was estimated at 8,538,000 at the end of 1951, an increase of 3,000,000 in 30 years.

Short Grain Crop Foreseen

OTTAWA.—According to the law of averages, Canada can look for a short crop of wheat any year now, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce, warned in the House of Commons.

The minister denied the suggestion of Hazen Argue, (CCF—Assiniboia), that there was a glut of wheat. Out of Canada's abnormally big crop last year more than a normal crop of wheat had already been sold.

"If we could move it faster we would sell more," said Mr. Howe. "The difficulty is in transportation rather than in sales. But it is my opinion, and I think the opinion of responsible men around the world, that the reserve stocks of wheat are not more than reasonable protection against the vagaries of nature."

"It must be remembered that this Continent has had seven or eight years of abnormally large crops. The law of averages works over a period, and we are due at any time for a short crop. It may say that the moisture conditions over the prairies this year are not too promising."

CANADA'S POPULATION

In the 12-month period, June 1, 1951, to June 1, 1952, Canada's population increased by 421,000 — from 14,009,000 to 14,430,000 according to D.B.S. estimates. In the six-month period June 1, 1952, to Dec. 1, 1952 the increase was 194,000, bringing the total to 14,624,000. This slowing down in our rate of population growth is due almost entirely to the smaller number of immigrants in 1952—about 164,000, as against 194,000 for the year 1951.

The town gardeners are now busy cleaning up their yards and getting ready for gardening.

A shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Geno Gifford and two little girls by the people of the town one evening last week. Mrs. Calliffo and two daughters arrived recently from Italy where Mr. Calliffo has been here for a year or so. He works for the C.P.R. and on Mondays barbers in Leslie Menard's barber shop. They were astounded at the amount of gifts they received which ranged from cooking utensils to towels, handkerchiefs and dolls for the children. Mr. Calliffo says that only well to do people in Italy have household effects like they received. He was given to him pictures taken of the gifts and sent to his home because if he wrote and told his relatives what he had received they would not believe him.

Father looking hard at his wife. "That boy has taken him from my pocket," he stormed. "Ernest," she protested, "how can you say that? Why, I might have done it." Father shook his head. "No, you didn't there was some left."

The doctor came out of the bedroom and said to the anxious husband, "I don't like the way your wife looks at all." "Well, that's the husband," he said. "To be honest with you, I don't care much for her looks either but she always takes good care of the kids and me so I figure it's worth it."

World markets are shrinking. Even the North American market is un dependable for Canadian exports. Aside from the threat of world war, which will hang over our heads until the end of this century at least the uncertainty of our foreign markets, which is part of the fear of war, must dominate Canadian economic policy. While every effort is being made to expand our markets to every corner of the earth, no effort should be spared to protect our domestic economy by bringing more producer-consumers here as quickly as possible. It is assumed to defer the admission of the right kind of immigrants until work can be found for them. Unlimited opportunities to work exist in this country. All that the right kind of people need is the chance to find or make something for themselves to do. The very existence of Canada as a free and independent nation is at stake now. Canada cannot survive as Canada without sufficient people who are willing to defend this nation and its wealth, and enjoy its potential. The present population of Canada is unequal to Canada's immediate needs.
